Aquarion Water Company lifts voluntary watering restrictions

Effective Friday, July 23, the Aquarion Water Company is ending its voluntary water restrictions. Customers will no longer be restricted from using water for any purpose.

Bruce Silverstone, Aquarion's Vice President of Corporate Communications, said, "Due to changing weather patterns and recent increased precipitation, we are now in a position to halt our voluntary water restrictions. We would like to thank all customers who assisted us in this important effort."

Silverstone added, "As we monitor the quickly changing weather of New England, we will continue to communicate with our customers in the event the situation requires any changes."

Aquarion Water Company serves approximately 580,000 people in 39 communities throughout Connecticut. It is among the seven largest investor-owned water utility companies in the U.S., and the largest in New England.
